WHAT TO EXPECT

Wayfinder trips are built around a simple idea: someone else handles the logistics, so you can actually be somewhere instead of managing it. You'll travel with a small group, usually around six people, so the pace stays personal rather than turning into a tour bus.

YOUR WAYFINDER LEADER

Every trip travels with one Wayfinder leader, someone who knows the destinations well and stays with the group from the airport pickup through to the final night. They handle the ferries, the bookings, and the local knowledge, point you toward the right cove or the right taverna, and step back when you'd rather explore on your own.

HOW THE DAYS WORK

Each stop has a handful of included highlights woven through it, the ones worth building a day around. Everything else is left open. Some days the group moves together, some days people scatter and find their own version of the island. Both are the point.

HOI AN ITINERARY

Hoi An is more than its lantern-lit old town. Spend a week moving between the ancient streets and the countryside beyond them cycle through rice paddies, explore the Thu Bon River, take a cooking class with local ingredients and spend an afternoon at An Bang Beach. As evening arrives, return to the old town as the lanterns begin to glow and let the night unfold slowly.

THE HIKE AWAITS

"The views were out of this world"
- Lulu 2023

Ninh Binh feels worlds away from the noise of Vietnam's cities. Limestone mountains rise dramatically from rice fields, rivers wind between cliffs and small villages sit quietly among the countryside.

Spend the week cycling between rural paths, drifting through Trang An by boat, climbing to viewpoints and taking long walks through the landscape. Here, the journey is as much about what you see along the way as where you're going.

Sapa is where the journey turns towards the mountains. Mist settles over steep valleys, rice terraces climb the hillsides and walking becomes the best way to experience the landscape. Spend a week hiking between villages, staying close to the countryside and learning from the communities who call these mountains home. There is no rush to reach the next viewpoint, the trail itself is the experience.
